Marin may get new light

By JUDY POLUMBAUM

ALBANY — Albany's Traffic and Safety Commission has received a recommendation for a new traffic light on one of the most heavily traveled thoroughfares in the city, saying an experimental effort to change traffic on Marin Avenue by installing islands and pedestrian crossings has not worked.

The commission said that a signal on Marin and Albany would help keep traffic down to the posted 25 mph speed limit, make crossing easier for pedestrians and cars coming out of the streets, reduce the severity of accidents and possible cut the number of accidents, chairwoman Susan Brown told the City Council last week.

The council agreed to hold a public hearing on the matter, as it did in 1979 when 600 people petitioned for a light at the same intersection.

At the first hearing, the council decided to install islands and take other traffic control measures, with their effectiveness to be determined at a later date.

Some said cars still speed, according to the commission, and that residents of the area said they were concerned for their small children.

Williams honored by King award

By DON McCORMACK

EL CERRITO — Shortly after Gertrude Williams came to Berkeley in 1945, she and her husband went out to eat at an ethnic restaurant on San Pablo Avenue.

Williams, now a resident of El Cerrito, was raised in Dallas, in a South mired in prejudice. "I had heard that California was just great," she said, referring to racial attitudes.

They were refused service.

"Maybe they didn't know us. Maybe we didn't know them," says Williams, who has since worked with many members of that group and other ethnic groups. "I was not bitter."

But the incident brought home to her that prejudice in America knew no boundaries and helped nudge her along the path she pursued.

Williams, who rises at 4:15 every morning, joined organizations, business groups, a sorority, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Congress of Racial Equality. She learned parliamentary procedure. And in some of these organizations she rose to the top. She has, for example, been president of the El Cerrito chapter of the NAACP.

These groups, and her job, brought her in contact with the establishment leaders and to them she preached jobs — jobs for black men and teenagers mainly, but also jobs for all

Is there a cat burglar?

Families fret over lost felines

By JUDY POLUMBAUM

ALBANY — A group of Albany cat-lovers say too many of their furry felines have vanished from their neighborhood without a trace.

At least half a dozen households concentrated around the 800 blocks of Santa Fe and San Carlos Avenues have lost a total of 11 cats over the past year. One family has lost three and two families are missing two.

Animal control officers in the area say cats are wont to wander, and that all kinds of hazards — from cars to dogs to open manholes — await them outside the home.

And 11 seems a small number out of Albany's total estimated cat population of 800 to 1,000.

Nonetheless, these neighbors are wondering whether the disappearances are more than coincidence.

They are asking such speculative questions as: Is a vindictive cat-hater spreading poison and secretly disposing of the bodies? Is an obsessive cat-lover stealing and hoarding other people's pets? Is a religious cult collecting cats? Does somebody have a taste for cat burgers?

They admit they have no evidence for any of these notions, but that doesn't stop them from worrying about the safety of their cats.

"They're being totally whisked away," declared Steven Smith of 802 Santa Fe Ave. Three cats have disappeared from the Smith home — one last April, one in December and one just this month.

The latter two were "youngsters" of seven or eight months, but the first one had been a family member for 12 years and was "not a wanderer."

Churches unite to pray together

This column publishes articles by members of the local clergy whose church or temple they represent. People in Albany, El Cerrito, Kensington, Thousand Oaks or Northridge may contribute a column. Write the editor for details, 525-2644. The week's column is by Virginia Hilton, pastor of Albany United Methodist Church.

By VIRGINIA HILTON

When members of a dozen Christian denominations from churches all over El Cerrito and Albany gather together to pray Sunday night, it's not just a "Service of Prayer for the Sick and Suffering."

There's obviously a need for expressions of Christianity; the different forms of worship and the different interpretations of Scripture brought us to more than 150 denominations.

Why, then, should we waste energy in a "Service of Prayer for Christian Unity," like the one planned for 7 p.m. at the Albany United Methodist Church (Marin at Stannage)? Why should the busy pastors of the El Cerrito-Albany Clergy Fellowship promote a service for people of all the churches, when it's so clear that people prefer their own denominations?

Let me suggest a few good reasons:

1. It's good to be reminded that we are part of something larger than a local church or a specific denomination. We are not just Lutherans or Episcopalians or Methodists; we are believers in Christ Jesus. Valuable as our own expressions of religion are, it is good to see that the odd-shaped puzzle piece we call a denomination fits into a much bigger picture — making its unique contribution, but never standing quite alone either.

2. The unity we express can be a source of power in the world. Christians have learned a lot since the days

Teaching acting to disabled people

Students practice voice, body skills

By ROBERTA ALEXANDER

Linda Spector believes that whatever benefits an able-bodied person can get from a drama class, so can a disabled one.

Spector, 41, teaches drama through Vista College, and her Monday evening class is specifically geared to people with disabilities or those with an interest in working with disabled people.

The class meets from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the First Congregational Church, 2345 Channing Way, Berkeley, and a new session begins Feb. 7.

"I believe that one problem that non-disabled people have with relating to disabled people is the barrier of the equipment," Spector explained. "The more non-disabled people see disabled people walking, performing, doing things, the more the stereotypes break down."

In her class Spector concentrates on teaching dramatic techniques, such as pantomime, improvisation, articulation and body movement.

"Disabled people need and can benefit from this kind of training," Spector said. "We work on what parts of their bodies they can move, on speech and articulation, on presenting oneself."

Spector has students with cerebral palsy, paraplegia, blindness, polio — a wide range of ailments. She says, in fact, that determining what is a disability is one of the issues dealt with in class.

"Two of the non-disabled students performed a piece about this," Spector recalled. "One was overweight and felt this represented a disability. The other was self-conscious about not being as bright as she wished, and she saw that too as a disability."

Spector, who taught high school drama for nine years in the Sacramento area, began teaching this class originally through the East Bay Center for the Performing Arts.

'One problem that non-disabled people have with relating to disabled people is the barrier of the equipment.'

After years of working with teenagers, she now concentrates on work with older students. In fact, one of her classes is geared for senior citizens, and she writes and directs plays for the College Avenue Players, a troupe of older performers.

"I see in my work with older people, how the stereotypes break down when they perform," she said.

And so her disabled students also perform. Under the title "Feet, Wheels and Wings," the class presents a series of improvisations and monologues, all dealing in some way with disability. And if that sounds like a heavy-duty program, Spector is quick to correct the impression:

"This class is an awful lot of fun. There is a lot of laughter and parties, and a lot of group involvement," she said.

(Interested students may enroll at the first session or through Vista College.)

Local pools struggling to keep afloat

By STEVE TADY

Just when it appeared the El Cerrito Swim Center might be forced to close for a long time because of rising energy costs, local supporters rallied to give the pool new life and it will reopen in February.

When the Richmond Unified School District eliminated the swim instruction program in 1981, the swim center was faced with a $10,000 budget imbalance. A four-month shutdown loomed for the citizens who used the pool as well as the El Cerrito

Sports

Gators swim team.

The "Save Our Pool" committee, through a series of fund-raising swimming events, raised $8,000 in the late stages of 1981 to keep the pool open and operating at regular intervals.

"We were going to have to close for four months. But they raised the $8,000 to keep it going. Since then, we have budgeted the money and used it to make up differences," said Recreation Division Supervisor Cliff Marchetti.

But the financial troubles were by no means over for the swim center. The $8,000 helped pay bills through most of the year, but when the pool closed last Dec. 1, there was a distinct possibility of a four-month closure.

The pool usually closes for maintenance in the winter, but not for four months. "It was a little of both this year. We planned to close to do the maintenance and to save money," Marchetti said.

Along came the revised version of the "Save Our Pool" committee. Instead of merely saving the pool, the group decided to stay behind the effort, creating the "Support Our Pool" group.

The new group was comprised mostly of the same people who had Lost cats worry families

The Cullup household at 823 Santa Fe Ave. lost two cats, Rusty and Dusty, last April.

"It was about the middle of the month, we noticed that they didn't come home," said Judy Cullup. "Rusty was a real homebound guy; he was home every night. Dusty would go away two or three nights at a time; that was just his nature. When the two of them didn't show up for about a week, we were really concerned because they were two different types of cats and we couldn't imagine them taking off together."

The family has since gotten two more cats, but keeps them inside, she added.

The Tchreyvogel household at 713 San Carlos Ave. also has lost two cats — a black-and-white one last spring and an orange-and-white one in the summer.

Barbara Tchreyvogel was not too worried when the first disappeared, because he liked to roam and she figured he might have found a new home. But the second one always hung around the house, and it wasn't like him to wander off, she said.

Tchreyvogel generally kept the pair, both males, inside. But she also has two female cats, and when the females were in heat she would put the males outside for the night.

"I should have gotten them fixed," she said ruefully.

Vera Plotkin of 818 Santa Fe Ave. lost her cat of eight years in September. She put the pet out one morning, and it didn't come home that evening.

"I don't think she would run away, because she was not that type," Plotkin said.

The Baileys at 816 Santa Fe Ave. had owned a cat three years when it disappeared five days before Christmas in 1981. "One morning he didn't appear for breakfast and we never saw him after that," recalled Nancy Bailey.

The family just thought "it was an unfortunate thing" until they heard of subsequent cases, Bailey said. The kids want another cat but have had to be satisfied with rats and hamsters, she added, because their parents don't want them to experience another "traumatic" loss.

At least two other neighbors have similar stories.

However, some cats have managed to stay around. "We have one here, and it's alright," said Frank Cazzoli of 829 Santa Fe. "We've had it about six or seven years."

"Actually, it's my neighbor's cat," he added. "But I'm here all day and my neighbor goes to work all day, so I call it my cat."

Albany animal control viewed about the matter. But a spokeswoman at Berkeley Animal Shelter said appearances are not unusual for cats like that every day.

"Cats wander; it's their prowl," she noted. "You masticate a cat. As a rule, what they want."

An employee at the Eastman Society said many cats are "lax" and fail to put down on their pet's flea collar.

And an Oakland Animal employee asserted that, "You don't keep track of their cats."

Dr. Mark Youdall, at an in an Oakland cat clinic, said cats "tend to roam." From they easily become strangers. "Once you feed almost formal adoption."

But Youdall found it a number of cats in one neighborhood would walk off. "You just expect bunches to disappear, rare event," he said. "It's in the nature of cats to be vagabond and take off."

When an animal disappears, fate is "wide open." Youdall could fall victim to a "malicious mischief."

minorities. A high-level employee of the U.S. Department of Energy, she also advises minorities how to prosper in business and how to train for jobs.

For her efforts, the county Board of Supervisors last week named her recipient of the Martin Luther King Jr. Award, an annual honor bestowed for humanitarian work.

King is one of her heroes. "The ultimate," she calls him. "I just feel honored that they would consider me for such an award."

A pragmatist by nature and a teacher by training, Williams, 59, got her moral grounding in a home steeped in the Methodist religion. Her grandfather was a Methodist minister and she is active in St. Paul African Methodist Episcopal Church in Berkeley.

"My mother told me that everyone has something to give. I asked myself, 'What do I have to give?' The answer: the benefit of my experience."

Asked how she would approach a white businessman who was reluctant to hire blacks because he was concerned about crime, she replied:

"I might say, where employment is low, crime is going to be high. That's true anywhere. Put the same feelings (the frustrations) in a white person and he will come up the same way."

"Let's give him (the black worker) something and give him a chance."

At times she sounds like she is describing two cultures that, instead of living for hundreds of years in the same country, have just met.

To the boss, she might caution, "don't taunt him (a young worker). He sees you as a rich white man (and may be resentful). He thinks you are going to pick on him."

To the black, she might advise, "Make some concessions." She will also say that his and her reputations are on the line, a little push to stay with the job.

What if negotiation and talking do not work? Williams, who works as a special advisor to a community affairs manager of the energy department, might take the form of labor actions.

But she adds, "Violence more harm than good."

Of reforms, Williams, a grown daughter, Patricia, said she sees teachers work closer.

"When they work together, can make some real progress," she said. "She does volunteer mentor in Oakland schools."

A game addict, Williams now divorced and lives with her brother on Conlon Ave. about 60 games, everything dominoes to a pool table.

She also enjoys dancing, although her games are 85. "When I hit 103, the boss can't hold me," she laughs.

"I have many awards summed up. 'But an award man's (King) name on it is special. He was just one of the best men I have known."

The good word

when Protestant kids didn't associate with Catholics and Presbyterians couldn't take communion with Baptists. One of the most practical lessons has been that when we work and witness together on certain goals we share, the rest of the world sits up and takes notice. We saw this as the Church fed and housed the refugees of World War II, and then moved together, through ecumenical agencies like Church World Service, to help the underdeveloped nations.

We saw this in the civil rights movements, as nuns, Baptist lay leaders, Orthodox priests and Unitarians marched together, and — just as important — organized quietly behind the scenes. We are seeing it now as people of faith band together at the heart of the Bilateral Nuclear Freeze movement.

If we hope to combat apathy, materialism, exploitation and prejudice — whether in our small communities or the whole wide world — Christians must work together.

3. It's a reminder that our faith is inclusive, not exclusive. Our praying together is witness to the fact — often forgotten — that what we have in common is greater than the things we differ on. Christians who want to bring non-Christians into the fellowship have a hard time explaining why certain other Christians are also "outsiders."

In 1960 my husband and I were among a handful of Americans representing our country at the European Ecumenical Youth Assembly in Lausanne, Switzerland. Some 1,500 young people were brought together and given permission by the fathers of their various churches to sing together, pray together, and engage in serious theological dialogue.

One thing they must not do: take communion together. That was too fraught with theological peril for the youth to attempt, and the boundaries between too high to cross.

Well, of course, it was only two days before these young people from 20 nations and 100 denominations had organized their own ecumenical communion service. In the high-vaulted cathedral of Lausanne, they took the bread and wine together, unaware and uncaring of what denomination came the person next to them in line.

As the leader of our team — a young minister whose name, Andrew Yarn, became better known in statesmanship and civil rights as he was organizing the first

"We are more alike than different. It's one Lord we use here, and with whom we drink."

"If we can't remember don't belong here at all."

That's the spirit in which we gathered at 7 p.m. Sunday singing our Redeemer's praise carrying on a tradition of Roman Catholic and Protestant priests in 1908, emphasizing World Council of Churches conference in 1926, increasing thousands of Protestants in the 40s, 50s, and 60s, heartily endorsed by the Vatican Council in the 60s.

We'll be bringing the our own unique fellowship of praise and prayer, emphasizing the power of what is common, as followers of children, and one raised the possibility that liability could be imposed on the city for accidents due to lack of traffic controls.

Marin cuts through a residential neighborhood on the south edge of the city, and a hospital, churches and schools are located along the route.

Traffic counts on the street range from 13,000 to 20,000 vehicles a day, according to Sanderson. She said 85 percent of the traffic is going up to 33 mph in the eastbound direction and 36 mph westbound — and courts generally do not punish speeding violations if they fall within that 85th percentile.

Sanderson also said there had been 80 reported accidents on Marin in Albany in one year, and the actual figure may be twice that since an estimated half of all auto accidents are not reported.

The council decided to wait until May to hold a public hearing on the desirability of a signal at Peralta, allowing time to study the effects of a new signal.

Masonic which is not yet a council member, said he was concerned about paying for a signal the one just installed at Peralta.

"We'll never have the best thing to do is to list," said Councilman McManus.

State's writers subject of class

Anyone curious about the history, legends and people of California may be interested in a new Vista College course called "California Writers."

The course, which opens Feb. 2 at the North Berkeley Senior Center (located at the corner of Hearst and Grove), is tuition-free and will be offered from 10 a.m. to noon. It runs through June 8.

The instructor is Lou Bohlen, an El Sobrante resident who teaches courses at Vista in composition, Shakespeare and English for non-native speakers. Bohlen also will teach "Drama through the Eyes of Shakespeare" at the Albany Senior Center from Feb. 2 through June 8.

For more information on either course, call Vista College at 841-8431.

Bohlen, a former newspaper reporter and public relations writer, also has taught at UC-Berkeley, where he worked as a field linguist and researcher for the western coastal section of "The Linguistic Atlas of the United States and Canada."

"This course is experimental," the El Sobrante resident said. "I don't know if such a course has been offered anywhere else."

His reading list includes Richard Henry Dana, Mark Twain, Bret Harte, Ambrose Bierce, Nathaniel West, John Muir, Robert Louis Stevenson, Jack London, Frank Morris, John Steinbeck, Jack Kerouac, Allen Ginsberg, Joan Didion and Ernest Callenbach.

"Each student will pick an author and one novel," he said. "It's really their course. They'll tell us all about their writer. And I'm going to have them play detective and investigate the writer's sources. What books and writers influenced their work. It's a technique developed in the 1920s and it's an easy way to get into the work of a particular author without a lot of technical training."

Bohlen said the course will include field trips to the John Muir house in Martinez, the Jack London house in Glen Ellen and to the Silverado Museum in Napa, which contains Robert Louis Stevenson memorabilia.

Trading in her blackboard for a traveller's guide

Her 34-year teaching career is at an end

By ROBERTA ALEXANDER

ALBANY — When Beth Heckman started teaching, most children started school at age five, and lived in two-parent households in which Mom stayed home with the kids.

After 34 years of teaching, Heckman, 60, retires at the end of this month, ending a lifetime of service through an era of change. Now a first grade teacher, she has also taught kindergarten and second grade.

"Children are handled by a lot more people now," Heckman said.

She noted that most of her students attended preschool for one or two years before going to kindergarten, and that many had been in day-care situations since infancy. These changes have changed the role of the primary teacher, she said.

"They are better adjusted to school at an earlier age. There aren't so many tears," she said, recalling past years in kindergarten when sobbing children did not want to leave their mothers at the classroom door.

"Kindergarten is not all social adjustment now," she said. "We can do more substantive work earlier."

This is due not only to preschool education, she said, but to the many technological developments that have affected the children's lives.

She thinks, for example, that children watch too much TV, but also notes that television has increased their vocabularies and exposed them to a greater variety of experiences.

Heckman says her present students have very different home lives than her earliest students did. "We have a more permissive society now, a different type of discipline, more working parents."

At the same time, Heckman says there are many more parents involved in primary education than there used to be. She says that she has enjoyed both the assistance and enrichment provided by parents, and worries that the increasing numbers of working parents will diminish school volunteering.

Heckman began her teaching career at the now defunct Codornices School, located in Albany Village, and in 1954 moved to Marin School, where she has been ever since.

Beth Heckman in her first grade classroom

"The kids used to call old Marin School 'the pink prison,'" she recalled.

In the course of her long career, Heckman has noted many changes in curriculum as well as in society, particularly in the areas of math and reading instruction.

"In a nutshell, we've gone back to a more phonetic approach," Heckman said of instruction in reading. She noted, however, that current theory supports a variety of approaches:

"Children need a lot of word attack skills," she said. "You tend to use what has been successful for children."

Not only has the curriculum changed, but so has the relative power of the local district. Heckman has seen the state increase its domination of education, which has had both good and bad effects.

"It used to be one teacher, one room. Now we have instructional aides, and can individualize the program a great deal," she said. "We have more time to do evaluations."

Many of her former students have sent their children to Heckman's class — although she confesses that she often does not recognize the adults. "But after they tell me who they are, then I remember them," she said.

It is that long-term relationship with people in the school district that was acknowledged earlier this month by the Board of Education, which issued a commendation to Heckman praising her "active participation" in education, and noting that she has "constructively influenced the lives of boys, girls and adults."

The board's commendation goes with Heckman into retirement, which she said is likely to include a lot of travelling. A resident of El Cerrito, Heckman said that her husband, a bank employee, will also retire on Jan. 31.

"We have a lot of projects we plan to do together," she said.

She expects to have more time for the cooking and gardening that she enjoys, as well as to take some classes and do some furniture refinishing. The Heckmans have one daughter, a nurse at Alta Bates Hospital.

Marin School will sponsor a retirement reception for Heckman on Wednesday, Jan. 26, at 7:30 p.m. at the school. Donations for a gift may be made to Helen Walker at the school.

School board notes more money woes

Per-pupil spending is low in California

By CHARLES PELTON

ALBANY — If California spent the same amount of money per student that is spent on the average nationwide, the Albany Unified School District would be more than 12 percent richer.

At the last school board meeting, Superintendent Steven Goldstone traced the steady decline both in the per-pupil personal income spent on public schools and in the dollar expenses per student over the past six years. "We are in a crisis situation as far as school funding is concerned in California," Goldstone said.

Between 1977 and 1982, per capita income increased the country from $5,900 to $9,521 and in the state from $400 to $10,938. California climbed from the eighth to fourth richest state, according to Goldstone.

Meanwhile the state declined from the 23rd to the 50th place in the percent of personal income spent on public school revenues. California was at the national average in 77, at 5.5 percent. That average had slipped to 4.8 percent in 1982. In California, it was 3.7 percent.

In 1977 the average amount of money spent nationally per year student was $1624. The state ranked 20th, with $602. By 1982 the U.S. average was $2690, the California average $2337.

The difference in the two amounts is $353. If that difference were added to the budget of a small district like Albany, with approximately 2300 students, the extra income would amount to over $800,000, or more than 12 percent of the district's budget.

"California used to truly be the golden state," Goldstone said. "Now it seems industry has difficulty attracting people here."

"I attribute this to many factors: housing costs, the general quality of life, and, of course, the quality of our schools."

Other statistics demonstrate Goldstone's point. California ranks last in the country in its pupil to teacher ratio. There are 23.61 students per teacher in the state, while the nation's average is 18.44.

"The situation won't get any better unless the people demand better education," he said. "There needs to be a radical change in the way we fund education in California."

"Uncertainty has increased with the new administration in Sacramento. We are much more dependent upon the state, both the governor and the legislature, than we were before Proposition 13 passed."

"We can't plan from year to year," Goldstone added. "This year we will have to develop a budget without knowing what our state funding will be the following year. The state provides close to 70 percent of our budget. It's a very difficult process for an operation which spends close to $7 million."

In other business the board:

• Reviewed the new science room set up at the Marin School. Principal Jon Frank said that the room had been operating for close to a week during the lunch hour with the help of several parent volunteers. He described the students' initial response as "enthusiastic."

• Reviewed the results of a computer proficiency survey. Many elementary and middle school students have had some exposure to computer operations and terminology. Only two percent of the middle school students have had absolutely no experience with computers. This compares with the 17 percent who are proficient with most or all computer operations and can use BASIC computer language.

"We'll use this study as a baseline from which to measure improvements in computer education," Assistant Superintendent Richard Rosenquist said.

• Accepted the request of Vista School's, Muriel Wessel, to be relieved of her responsibilities as principal after the end of this academic year.

"I felt like I had too many responsibilities for too short a day," Wessel said. "I want to concentrate on my teaching and my family. I'm still young and don't want to get old too quickly."

• Authorized the temporary hiring of Marilyn Chamberlain as a first grade teacher at Marin School through the balance of the academic year.

• Heard a presentation by Anita Madrid, of U-C, Berkeley, about the various programs which the university system offers gifted high school students. Albany presently participates in two of these programs: MESA, Mathematics Engineering Science Achievement, and PDP, Professional Development Program.

• Approved applications for various state and federal categorical funds and for federal funds to support the high school's vocational educational program.

Classroom aides need skills tested

More than 100 Richmond Unified classroom aides, who fall under the provisions of a new state law, will be taking proficiency tests this spring to prove their competence in reading, writing and mathematics.

The employees are part of a workforce of 550 regular, special education and substitute aides hired after March 1, 1982. Aides employed before that time are exempt from the new law.

The school board had the choice Wednesday night of granting the district's aides a waiver from the requirement, but on a staff recommendation they agreed unanimously to grant no exemption this year. Last year the panel gave the employees a one-year waiver while the law was being revised in the Legislature.

Thomas Anton, assistant superintendent for personnel, said the tests will be equivalent to the high school proficiencies, basic skills exams required for graduation.

He said the aides will take the tests "in the near future," after they have had enough time to brush up on their skills.

Aides who fail one or more of them exams will have up to three years to try again.

Teachers hired after February 1983 who have not taught in the district for 39 months will also have to take competency tests, according to the new law. The tests are more rigorous than those for aides.

Richmond Unified has 1,384 employees with teaching credentials, including administrators and classroom teachers.

Pool debts threaten to sink

helped save the pool in 1981. The El Cerrito Gators, swimmers and parents, adult lap swimmers and others who used the pool during open hours raised funds.

Since the word got out that the pool might be forced to shut down, the "Support Our Pool" group has continued to have swim-a-thons, in which swimmers are sponsored by friends and relatives for number of laps completed over exhaustive stretches in the water.

If a swimmer goes for 100 laps and gets sponsored for five cents a lap, $5 is earned for the program. With hundreds of swimmers going hundreds of laps, the money adds up quickly.

The "Support Our Pool" people have earned $5,600 so far this year.

"It's exciting. We are fixing tears in the fiberglass wall of the pool and we are going to reopen in February some time, when the repairs are done. We would be losing at least $8,000 without the help of the program," Marchetti said.

But even with all the community spirit, the El Cerrito Gators will be without a pool for more than two months. The Gators do take a break over the Christmas holidays, but they have no home to come back to right away.

Coach Tari Crowder has made the best of the situation. "When the pool closed, we swam at the Albany pool. We did not get the regular hours in, junior AAU swimmers need to swim more than the recreation swim teams. But we also use the Contra Costa College pool now three days a week," she said.

So even without their home, the Gators have continued to work hard and will be gearing up for the first of several big AAU meets.

"We're fine," Crowder says. "We have to drive a little longer, but it's not too bad. Swimming is alive. It will take public support to keep it going."

The largest financial problem for the swim center is a major one for a lot of people. It can be summed up in three letters: PG&E.

"For a full month of operation, we pay $3,864 for gas and between $600 and $700 for electric. That doesn't even include staff or chemicals. In a lean month, we bring in about $4,000," Marchetti said.

"In the summer, you pick up some swimmers to help offset the cost. If we have a hot spring, that would really help," he added.

In an attempt to help defray more costs, the swim center will be starting a masters swim program in March.

Swimmers over the age of 18 are invited to come to the swim center and take part in structured workouts. They will be divided into age groups and will compete in meets against other masters teams.

"It will not solve all the problems, the cost of energy has been so high.

We're just looking for programs to support existing programs," Marchetti said.

He hopes that the masters will serve the same purpose as recreation programs.

"Hopefully, it will be a softball. A lot of adults pressed interest in structured programs. I've talked to people who swam in the 40s," he said.

At the Albany pool, the situation is fairly stable.

Last year, the pool, located at the high school, broke a major deficit should occur in any school district would be a tab.

The Albany pool's other problem is that it is indoors: the heat is longer and the fuel bills are expensive.

Adult lap swimming is doing well at the Albany swimming lessons are well. But energy costs concern the swim center's director Connie Jackson.

"We've had to cut back on energy use. We have been educating the public on the showers. We've added heaters in the showers. Energy is our biggest threat. The pool has gone up about 30 percent a year," Jackson said.

Could the "Support Our Pool" program come to life in the future? The support is certainly there, Jackson said.

Soccer club nabs division

ALBANY — For the first time since it was founded in 1975, the Albany/Berkeley Soccer Club has fielded a team which has won its division's cup in the California Youth Soccer League's District IV invitational tournament.

There are no bench-warmers on ABSC teams, as the club policy is to give every player a chance. The Mariners, an under 14 B division team, won all three of the semifinals games and overwhelmed the Benicia Braves 5-1 in the finals.

Several of the Mariners have been playing on ABSC teams for the last five or six years, but other soccer only a year or two ago. The club signed players this year before closing off registration because of fields.

The players are now looking forward to the Contra Costa Youth Soccer League tournament in January, and some are looking further than that.

"Maybe if we win the state cup we could go to Nationals, and then maybe to the International. Although," he added after a moment's pause, "a German team would probably be pretty hard to beat."

EBMUD eyes expansion in Central C.C. County

By JON BASHOR

Faced with growing local demand and requests from other cities for water service, East Bay Municipal Utility District officials are now trying to determine how much water is enough to meet customers' needs.

Although EBMUD owns rights to more water than it now uses, a drought could cause forced rationing. And as more customers tap into EBMUD water mains, the likelihood and severity of future water shortages increase.

To determine just how much water is available and how much water will be needed in the future, the district has conducted a water availability study.

If EBMUD directors decide that water supplies are more than adequate, requests for water service by the cities of Martinez, Antioch and Pittsburg may be granted.

Directors representing West Contra Costa County, though, contend that supplying areas outside district boundaries may come at the expense of current customers.

Recently, directors discussed whether EBMUD should simply sell off its extra water or whether it should try to annex the areas which want EBMUD water.

Unable to reach a conclusion, the board of directors will continue the discussion at their next meeting on Tuesday.

"The prudent way to proceed is to make surplus water available to areas outside EBMUD by contract," said Director Helen Burke, who represents the Berkeley-El Cerrito area.

Sanford Skaggs, re-elected of the board, said he favored having EBMUD serve Central Contra Costa County permanently.

"It is not in our best interest to supply water on an interim basis," Skaggs said. "Because service could be interrupted when that water is most needed."

To guarantee that water is always available to all EBMUD customers, Director Walter McLean said "outside areas should eventually become part of EBMUD."

But commitments to serve non-EBMUD areas could result in deliveries of lower-quality water to all customers. Or shortages could be created if a dry spell reduces the amount of water in EBMUD reservoirs.

"If our reservoirs are drawn down during a hot spell," said Director Jack Hill of the West County, "we may be unable to refill

Watch out for sirens

Alameda County and participating municipal jurisdictions will test disaster warning sirens at 11 a.m. on Friday, Jan. 28. This test is held every three months.

In Alameda County the Office of Emergency Services conducts these tests to insure that the sirens are operable. Volunteers will check Alameda County's sirens operation and report any that fail the test.

The test will use a steady one minute sound, followed by one minute of silence, and conclude with one minute of rising and falling sound.

Daycamp for holiday week

EL CERRITO — The City of El Cerrito is offering a daycamp program during the school holiday week of Feb. 7-10.

The program includes crafts, games, sports and interest clubs. Special activities will be planned related to the week's theme "I spy."

Daycamp meets from 7:30 or 9-3:30, Monday through Thursday.

them without creating a phony drought for some customers."

The district now uses 200 million gallons a day. Transported through 90 miles of pipelines, the water is either stored in reservoirs or piped directly to customers.

If there was a strong demand for water here, Hill said customers may not get all the water they want while the district replenishes the reservoirs which provide a 6-month standby supply.

District General Manager Jerome Gilbert said an adequate water supply could always be obtained because EBMUD has rights to American River water which could be taken from the Sacramento Delta.

Delta water, however, has a higher salt content than Mokelumne water and could pose health problems for some residents. It is the high salt content of delta water that the district will always risk shortages unless consumption is cut back to 178 million gallons a day.

But even with conservation programs implemented by the district, demand for water within EBMUD is expected to rise to 222 million gallons a day by 1990.

If water is provided to Martinez, Antioch and Pittsburg as requested, total demand could rise to 245 million gallons a day. At this level, however, the study concludes there won't be enough water one year out of 100.

Once the directors can decide what level of risk is acceptable, surplus amounts can then be sold to other areas. The board will try to reach a decision on this matter at its meeting at 1:15 p.m. on Tuesday.

In an unrelated matter, the board will consider a staff proposal to increase rental rates for boats and reserved picnic areas at EBMUD recreational areas, including San Pablo Reservoir.

Under the proposals, the hourly rate for rowboats and canoes would double, from $2 to $4, and from $6 to $8 per hour for motor boats.

Reserved picnic sites in the northern area, now available free of charge, would cost $15 on week days and $60 on weekends.

Obituaries

Grace Long

EL CERRITO — Funeral services for Grace M. Long, a local resident for 60 years and former clerk for the U.S. Postal Service, were held last week at Ellis-Olson Mortuary.

A native of Iowa, Mrs. Long lived in El Cerrito and died Jan. 19 in a Berkeley hospital. She was 82.

She was a member of the VFW and American Legion Auxiliaries of El Cerrito.

Survivors include her daughter, LaVonne L. Bruscher of El Cerrito; two grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Entombment was at Sunset Mausoleum. The family prefers remembrances to the Elm Branch of the Children's Hospital in Oakland.

Frances Bowers

ALBANY — Services for Frances A. Bowers, past president of the Berkeley Board of Realtors and a longtime local resident, were held last week-end at Ellis-Olson Mortuary.

A native of Kansas, Mrs. Bowers died Jan. 12 in a Roseville hospital.

She was employed for 30 years as a real estate broker for Pruter Real Estate of Albany.

She is survived by a daughter, Barbara Fike, and son, Bruce Pruter, both of Roseville; her mother, Maude Bradshaw, and a sister, Myrta Williams, both of Arizona, and four grandchildren.

Committal was private. The family requests that memorials be in the form of donations in Mrs. Bowers' name to the American Cancer Society, 10290 San Pablo Ave., Suite 102, El Cerrito, CA, 94530.

At the southern area, the weekday rate would drop from $30 to $20 while the current $30 weekend rate would be upped to $70.

Obituaries

Antoinette Latronico

ALBANY — Funeral services for Antoinette Latronico, who died in a Berkeley hospital at the age of 67 on Jan. 15 were held last week in the Ellis Olson Mortuary.

Mrs. Latronico was a native of Gustine and a longtime Albany resident.

She is survived by two daughters, Theresa Rose Latronico of Albany and Mary Ann Heil of Vacaville; a son, Frank P. Latronico of Twainharte; a sister, Mary Aragona of Patterson; two brothers, Joaquin DeLash of Patterson and Pete DeLash of San Jose; and eight grandchildren.

Burial was at St. Joseph's Cemetery.

Ernest Johnson

EL CERRITO — Services for Ernest S. Johnson were held last week at Ellis-Olson Mortuary.

A native of Oakland and a longtime local resident Mr. Johnson died in San Pablo hospital. He was 78.

A retired lieutenant colonel in the U.S. Army Quartermaster Corps, Mr. Johnson was a member of Live Oak Lodge No. 61, F. and A.M., of Oakland and the Oakland Scottish Rite Bodies; the Albany-Berkeley Hi-12 Club; the Retired Officers Assn. and the East Bay Chapter of the ROA and Albany American Legion Post No. 292.

Following his Army service, he was an accountant for 40 years with Greyhound Bus Lines.

He is survived by his wife, Anna; a daughter, Hellene Higgins of Arizona; a son, Russell, of Oregon, and three grandchildren.

Services were officiated by Live Oak Lodge No. 61, F. and A.M. Burial was in Sunset View Cemetery.

Watch out for sirens

Alameda County and participating municipal jurisdictions will test disaster warning sirens at 11 a.m. on Friday, Jan. 28. This test is held every three months.

In Alameda County the Office of Emergency Services conducts these tests to insure that the sirens are operable. Volunteers will check Alameda County's sirens operation and report any that fail the test.

The test will use a steady one minute sound, followed by one minute of silence, and conclude with one minute of rising and falling sound.

Daycamp for holiday week

EL CERRITO — The City of El Cerrito is offering a daycamp program during the school holiday week of Feb. 7-10.

The program includes crafts, games, sports and interest clubs. Special activities will be planned related to the week's theme "I spy."

Daycamp meets from 7:30 or 9-3:30, Monday through Thursday.
